Case Study

At this popular and expanding local supermarket store in Preston, the owners were looking for a floor finish in their new retail areas that was equivalent to traditional, but very costly, terrazzo tiles, particularly in terms of its appearance and durability. This retail unit has a high footfall, with over 5,000 customers in an average week, which also meant that a low maintenance solution was necessary to minimize any closures. Traditional terrazzo tiles have an attractive appearance and the surfaces are durable, but from their own painful past experience, the owners also knew that there would also be a need to continually monitor and regularly replace the grout. This is frequently necessary with terrazzo tiling to prevent the creation of slip-hazards, as well as to prevent joint hygiene issues that could allow dirt build-up and unacceptable microbiological growth in a modern food store.

Fortunately, MCG Coatings the flooring contractor, had contacted NCC for advice on the best solution, and we were able to provide the required cost-effective solution, which was also extremely hard-wearing, by using a Conica epoxy resin flake system that has a similar look to Terrazzo. However, this is a completely seamless and joint-free system, which produces an impervious, easy to clean, low maintenance floor finish. The new concrete slab was prepared and sealed with a penetrating Conifloor primer, then the Conifloor base coats were applied and broadcast with coloured flakes, then the final clear Conifloor sealing topcoat was applied overall.
